The screenshot displays the HP OpenView Operations Traditional Operator GUI, which is a complex dashboard for system monitoring. It features several panels:

- Top Panels: Two panels at the top, "Server Group (Local)" and "Network Server (Local)", each containing a grid of colored icons representing different system components.
- Map Panel: A central panel showing a map of Europe with several server icons overlaid on it, indicating their geographical locations.
- Network Diagram: A panel on the right showing a network topology diagram with a central node and several peripheral nodes connected by lines.
- Log Window: A large window at the bottom displaying a list of system events. The log entries include columns for severity, date, time, node, application, message, and text.

Severity	Date	Time	Node	Application	Message	Text

Managing Business and Service Networks Lundy Lewis,2005-12-07 Most everything in our experience requires management in some form or other our gardens our automobiles our minds our bodies our love lives our businesses our forests our countries etc Sometimes we don't call it management per se We seldom talk about managing our minds or automobiles But if we think of management in terms of monitoring maintaining and cultivating with respect to some goal then it makes sense We certainly monitor an automobile albeit unconsciously to make sure that it doesn't exhibit signs of trouble And we certainly try to cultivate our minds This book is about managing networks That itself is not a new concept We've been managing the networks that support our telephones for about 100 years and we've been managing the networks that support our computers for about 20 years What is new and what motivated me to write this book is the following i the enormous advancements in networking technology as we transition the st from the 20 century to the 21 century ii the increasing dependence of human activities on networking technology and iii the commercialization of services that depend on networking technology e.g email and electronic commerce
