A verb is a word used to express action, condition, or a state of being.

An action verb expresses a physical or mental action. An action verb that appears with a direct object (a person or thing that receives the action of the verb) is called a transitive verb. An action verb without a direct object is an intransitive verb.

A linking verb links the subject of a sentence to a word in the predicate. Some linking verbs are forms of to be, such as am, is, was, and were. Others, such as appear, become, feel, look, remain, sound, and taste, may express conditions. Some verbs such as grow, feel, and taste can be either action or linking verbs.

Auxiliary verbs, also called helping verbs, are combined with verbs to form verb phrases. Some common auxiliary verbs are forms of be, and had, do, might, would, will, must, could, and would.
