

The Lock Screen

Customise it!

The iPad's Lock screen is what's shown when your iPad goes into lock mode. To open it, you use Face ID or your passcode. But there's a lot you can do with your Lock screen, especially when running iPadOS 18. You can change your wallpaper, review your notifications, swipe to widgets and more.

First steps with the lock screen

1 Even with your tablet locked, you can swipe the Lock screen right to access your Widgets. If you want to interact with them, though, you're asked to unlock your iPad with Face/Touch ID or passcode. Swiping the Lock screen left opens the Camera app; just the thing if you need to take a shot really quickly.

2 With your iPad locked, you can still scroll up and down your notifications. Tap on one to open it in the app that created it, but you'll have to unlock your tablet using Face ID or your passcode when asked. You can scroll up and down the list before you open your iPad, though.

3 While the screen is locked, you can still swipe down from the middle of the screen to open the Spotlight Search field. Search for anything on the iPad you want, but you're likely to have to unlock your iPad to utilise it.

4 If your face is covered or you're wearing gloves so can't use Touch ID, you can still unlock your iPad. Just try to unlock it in the usual way, and when your biometric ID fails, simply type your passcode in the window that appears.
