

Geography Revision notes
CHAPTER-2
LATITUDES AND LONGITUDES

Revision Notes

- The network of parallels of latitudes and meridians of longitude drawn on a globe or a map is called the Geographic Grid.
- The two most important lines of latitude and longitude are the Equator and the Prime Meridian, respectively, which are used as reference points.
- The Equator is a horizontal line drawn on the globe which lies midway between the two poles, dividing the Earth into halves.
- Latitude is the angular distance of a point on the surface of the Earth, measured in degrees from the centre of the Earth, north or south of the Equator.
- A Line of Latitude is one which joins all places having the same angular distance (latitude), north or south of the Equator.
- Lines of latitude are circles parallel to the Equator and to each other and therefore are called Parallels of latitude, running west to East.
- The Equator 0° is the longest line of latitude and all other lines of latitude decrease in length, with distance away from the Equator. The Poles are mere dots.
- All lines of latitude are circles. However, the Equator is the only great circle.
- There are 181 lines of latitude in all ($90+1+90$), at 1° interval.
- The ground distance between two successive lines of latitude is 111 kms or 69 miles.
- The Equator divides the Earth into the Northern and Southern Hemispheres.
- The uses of lines of latitudes are as follows:
- They help us to calculate the ground distance of any two places lying north or south of the Equator.
- They help us in determining the thermal zones of the Earth.
- Together with the lines of longitude, they help us in locating places on the globe.
- The important parallels of latitude are the Equator (0°), the Tropic of Cancer ($23\frac{1}{2}^\circ$ N) and Capricorn ($23\frac{1}{2}^\circ$ S), the Arctic ($66\frac{1}{2}^\circ$ N) and the Antarctic ($66\frac{1}{2}^\circ$ S) Circles, and the North Pole (90° N) and the South Pole (90° S).
- Based on lines of latitude, the following Thermal Zones can be determined :-
- Torrid Zone - It lies between the Tropic of Cancer ($23\frac{1}{2}^\circ$ N) and the Tropic of Capricorn ($23\frac{1}{2}^\circ$ S). This is the hottest zone.
- Temperate Zone - The North Temperate Zone lies between the Tropic of Cancer and the Arctic Circle ($23\frac{1}{2}^\circ$ N to $66\frac{1}{2}^\circ$ N) and the South Temperate zone lies between the Tropic of Capricorn and the Antarctic Circle ($23\frac{1}{2}^\circ$ S to $66\frac{1}{2}^\circ$ S). Temperatures are moderate.
- The Frigid Zone - The North Frigid Zone lies between the Arctic Circle and the North Pole ($66\frac{1}{2}^\circ$ N to 90° N) and the South Frigid Zone lies between the Antarctic Circle and the South Pole ($66\frac{1}{2}^\circ$ S to 90° S). Temperatures are extremely low.
- Longitude is the angular distance of a point on the surface of the Earth, measured in degrees from the centre of the Earth, east or west of the Prime Meridian. A Meridian of Longitude is one which joins all places having the same angular distance (longitude), east or west of the Prime Meridian.
- Lines of longitude are called Meridians because all places along the same meridian of longitude experience noon or mid-day at the same time.
- All meridians of longitude are of equal length since they are all semi-circles converging at the two Poles, running North to South.
- All diametrically opposite pairs of meridians together form Great Circles, for example, 180° E and W longitude and the Prime Meridian 0° , together form a Great Circle.
- There are 360° meridians of longitude in all ($180+180$), at 1° interval.
- The ground distance between two consecutive lines of longitude decreases gradually with distance away from the Equator. Along the Equator, they are 111 kms apart.
- Use of Latitudes and Longitudes in finding a location:
- Longitude is measured 180° both East and West of the Prime Meridian.
- It aids to locate longitudinal positions on a globe or map, meridians are plotted and drawn from pole to pole where they meet.
- The distance per degree of longitude at the Equator is about 111.32 km (69.16 miles) and at the poles, 0.
- Longitude and Time:
- There is a close relation between longitude and time.
