

SEEING LIGHT

Light is made of tiny particles called photons. These photons travel in straight lines. When they hit an object, they bounce back. This is how we see things.

HOW WE SEE

Light enters our eyes through the cornea and lens. It then hits the retina, which sends signals to the brain. The brain interprets these signals as the objects we see.

Light rays from the sun hit a book. Some rays hit the cover, some hit the pages. The rays that hit the cover bounce back towards our eyes. This is how we see the book.
