Fishy Business Guide Service:

Fishy Business J J Murray, 2025-01-07 When most people think about a fishing guide they're pretty envious about the lifestyle of a fishing guide. Compared to a person who sits at a desk for a daily nine to five time period and stares forlornly out the window looking at the great outdoors, the fishing guide's office is the great outdoors. A fishing guide seems like the perfect job. Outside in the fresh air, always on the water, fishing every day and never locked in the confines of a building. Plus you actually get paid for doing that task. Can't get any better than that lifestyle. Assumption about an occupation can often be misleading, and this is certainly true about a fishing guide's occupation. Fishing guides work long hours and perform a lot of unseen tasks that add up to even more hours. There are other factors as well, including dealing with adverse weather, equipment maintenance and malfunctions, and the complexity of human interaction that occurs in close quarters. At the end of the day, it's not easy being a fishing guide, and it's a challenging occupation that beats up a lot of the people that participate in it. Fishing guides see and experience a lot on a daily basis. Guides have stories, and lots of them. Stories that consist of adventure, excitement, bewilderment, disappointment, frustration, and humor. Within these pages are candid stories told by many different fishing guides. Stories that will captivate the reader and adjust perception about what it's really like to be a fishing guide.

Sounds of Silence Idir Peçi,2006 The subject of this thesis is the relationship between administrative supervision criminal investigation and the nemo tenetur principle The point of departure is the distinction made in Dutch law and doctrine between administrative supervision and criminal investigation Such a distinction is often made in the area of the enforcement of socio economic regulatory legislation where supervision and investigation are perceived as isolated phases of the regulatory process The supervision phase gives way to the investigation phase as soon as a suspicion that a criminal offence has been committed arises Initially one of the main arguments in favour of the distinction seems to have been that a citizen s obligation to provide information to the supervising authorities conflicts with a suspect s right to remain silent during the investigation phase Therefore the central question of this study is whether it is necessary to have a strict demarcation between administrative supervision and criminal investigation in order to better respect the nemo tenetur principle
