Fission and Fusion Lefliqe, 2019 This lesson plan covers nuclear fission and nuclear fusion Cluster Expression in Fission and Fusion in High-dimensional Macroscopic-microscopic Calculations, 2004 We discuss the relation between the fission fusion potential energy surfaces of very heavy nuclei and the formation process of these nuclei in cold fusion reactions In the potential energy surfaces we find a pronounced valley structure with one valley corresponding to the cold fusion reaction the other to fission As the touching point is approached in the cold fusion entrance channel an instability towards dynamical deformation of the projectile occurs which enhances the fusion cross section These two cluster effects enhance the production of superheavy nuclei in cold fusion reactions in addition to the effect of the low compound system excitation energy in these reactions Heavy ion fusion reactions have been used extensively to synthesize heavy elements beyond actinide nuclei In order to proceed further in this direction we need to understand the formation process more precisely not just the decay process The dynamics of the formation process are considerably more complex than the dynamics necessary to interpret the spontaneous fission decay of heavy elements However before implementing a full dynamical description it is useful to understand the basic properties of the potential energy landscape encountered in the initial stages of the collision The collision process and entrance channel landscape can conveniently be separated into two parts namely the early stage separated system before touching and the late stage composite system after touching The transition between these two stages is particularly important but not very well understood until now To understand better the transition between the two stages we analyze here in detail the potential energy landscape or collision surface of the system both outside and inside the touching configuration of the target and projectile In Sec 2 we discuss calculated five dimensional potential energy landscapes inside touching and identify major features In Sec 3 we present calculated collision surfaces for still separated targets and projectiles Implications for SHE formation are discussed Section 4 is a short summary of the present analysis
