

SEEING LIGHT

Light is made of tiny particles called photons. These photons travel in straight lines. When they hit an object, they bounce back. This is how we see things.

HOW WE SEE

Light enters our eyes through the cornea and lens. It then hits the retina, which sends signals to the brain. The brain interprets these signals as the objects we see.

Light rays from an object enter the eye through the cornea and lens. They then hit the retina, which sends signals to the brain.

REFRACTION

DISPERSSION

White light is made of many colors. When it passes through a prism, it is split into its constituent colors.

Red light has the longest wavelength and is refracted the least. Violet light has the shortest wavelength and is refracted the most.

Dispersion of white light into its constituent colors is called dispersion.

SCATTERING

Light is scattered in all directions by small particles. This is why we see the sky as blue.
