Official Course Description

ENGL 1010 Freshman English (3). An introduction to the fundamentals of written composition and communication through the study of illustrative essays, as well as an introduction to the reading and critical analysis of essays. Grammar and mechanics, insofar as they are an integral part of developing proficiency in writing, are covered in the course. Those students who do not demonstrate satisfactory performance in the use of grammar and mechanics are required to attend the Writing Center. Successful completion of English 1010 is a prerequisite for English 1020. All degree-seeking students must earn at least a C in this course. (TSU Undergraduate Catalog 2011-2013 131)

Rationale

Freshman English I and II help students learn to write clearly, concisely, and professionally and teaches them to give constructive feedback on writing. These skills are essential to college coursework and indispensable in the workplace.

Prerequisites

None.

Official Learning Competencies

As a student completing 1010 with a C or better, you will be able to:

1. Demonstrate understanding of and ability to read and respond to the demands of the rhetorical situation (author, audience, and subject) in both oral and written communication.
2. Read critically and analyze various types of assigned readings on the basis of structure, pattern, and meaning in order to produce original papers that show development of topic through organization (such as topic sentence, support of the central idea through details, and rhetorical patterns).
3. Invent, write, revise, edit, and rewrite formal essays in response to readings which develop appropriate rhetorical patterns (i.e., narration, example, process, comparison/contrast, classification, cause/effect, definition, argumentation) and other special function(s) (i.e., literary analysis or research) while demonstrating writing skills from process to product.
4. Produce final papers that show growth in principles of good writing, such as organization (e.g., introduction/body/conclusion or outlining), development (clarifying transitions between sentences and paragraphs), unity (connected ideas), and which demonstrate an understanding of the substance of the topic.
5. Complete at least one writing assignment that demonstrates a limited use of MLA documentation form and basic research ability.
