Ludwik: Notes on Future Ways of Learning, Working, and Living Joachim Broecher,2023-08-14 Young people who say goodbye to school education because they do not feel addressed by the learning forms and structures there Many no longer even learn the absolute basics Learning groups in daycare centers and schools overloaded with social problems Shortage of skilled workers in educational institutions and in the care of the elderly Alienation of many adults in functionalist professional life Fragmentation of society Social isolation of individuals Compensatory life in digital parallel worlds If we had an unconditional basic income for everyone including the middle class that generates the tax revenue in the sense of an incentive to act entrepreneurially and to assume social responsibility if we converted compulsory schooling into compulsory self designed education and if Germany were to come to terms with a sensible migration policy then people could get together and buy the vacant real estate in eastern Germany and turn it into vibrant craft technical or agricultural projects including in other parts of the country and in the cities Young people would be able to move from project to project wandering around learning on their own Children would grow up with several caregivers a broader range of male and female role models and professional profiles which would benefit their development People would then do a lot of things themselves again and help each other in the communities from caring for small children to pedagogical work with older children parallel to the schools and day care centers that continue to exist but have become fewer in number to the integration and care of the elderly Vocational schools and universities could make entrance exams for those who learn in their own projects A lot of driving would be eliminated which would also be good for the climate Deceleration would occur people would have more time for each other and would be healthier What we need is a different social structure and a philosophy from which identity promoting and socially cohesive narratives can emerge anew This second documentary volume shows what the status is in the further development of a three sided farm from 1884 located in Anhalt into a think tank and in the creation of the first cultural and educational references

Halfyard, 2016-06-20 Characters and plot developments similarly are enhanced by their musical accompaniment. The different scoring strategies employed in supernatural and horror based genres comprising for example True Blood and Supernatural are considered alongside cult shows set in our reality such as Dexter, The Sopranos and 24. questions about the categorial status of English participles and gerunds The book makes a major point participles are not verb forms which behave like adjectives but actually are adjectives linked with verbs via derivation It argues that observed differences between participles and adjectives which in the past have prompted linguists to draw a category distinction between them are in reality due to the non prototypical semantics of participles a feature also found in other types of adjectives with strikingly identical effects This analysis then accounts for the word formation of adjectives such as boring tired drunk which has always been mysterious The book investigates the consequences of this analysis for our understanding of gerunds and V ing N compounds With its comprehensive study of ing forms the book calls into question a number of widely held assumptions regarding the distinction between derivation and inflection and the role of semantics in syntactic and morphological analysis This book is of great interest to researchers and students in linguistics interested in morphology syntax semantics lexical categorisation
