

Assembling Your Writing Portfolio

Why a writing portfolio?

A writing portfolio is a collection of your work that you've completed during a semester, a year, or even a lifetime. Portfolios show a few different things:

- They show how you have grown and developed as a writer. Nobody ever becomes perfect as a writer. (Not even people who are professional writers!) But almost everyone changes, develops, and improves on certain aspects. A semester portfolio is your chance to show how you've grown in certain areas of your writing.
- They show work that you are proud of. This is your chance to say what you did really well during the semester. And you can talk about why you are proud of it. Your instructor is interested to see what you enjoyed the most and what you learned the most from.
- They show what you've taken away from this semester, and what you will use in the future. You will have a chance to write a reflective essay that gives you a chance to really think about what you learned about yourself as a writer.

Portfolios are not graded in WRD, but they are carefully looked at by your instructor. (If you do not turn in a portfolio, however, you will receive E for the semester.)

Instructions

Please include the following items in your portfolio:

- Include the final draft of every major written assignment you handed in this semester in WRD 110, 111, or 112. This includes any proposals you may have completed.
- Include the rough draft of your major assignment.
- Choose three other kinds of writing you did in your WRD class. These can even be informal writings, minor assignments, blog posts, free thoughts, etc. Choose writings or work that you feel proud of or that shows something about you as a writer.
- Choose at least one other kind of writing you did either for another class this semester or writing you did for yourself (outside of school) during the semester. You may include up to three other pieces of writing. Examples include:
 - A lab report for your BIO course.
 - A long letter you wrote to your landlord about a complaint.
 - A blog post you did on your personal blog.
 - A short story you wrote.
 - An essay you wrote for your History course.
 - An essay for a summer internship position.
 - A website you created for your cousin's business.
 - Many other possibilities

Assessing the English Language Writing of Chinese Learners of English Liz Hamp-Lyons, Yan Jin, 2022-05-24 This book focuses on the assessment of English language writing in China mainland the territories of Hong Kong and Macau and Taiwan The first part of the book describes how writing in English has been assessed in Chinese contexts in the past 25 years and how it continues to be assessed at present The second part of the book presents reports of work such as formative classroom based assessment feedback based or feedback led approaches learning oriented assessment portfolios as well as the important issue of teacher professional development in writing assessment This two part division relates to and reflects what has been happening in writing assessment internationally in the UK from the 1940s and in the US in the past 25 years The use of English for international business communication for international political negotiations and its rapidly increasing use as a medium of instruction in some subject areas has led to a rapid increase in the numbers of Chinese L1 speakers who are learning and being assessed in English This is often done with an emphasis on reading and writing The vast majority of assessments of English language writing are done through large scale direct testing that uses simple prompts tasks and short writing samples This book explores best practices in assessing the writing in English of native speakers of Chinese Assessing the English Language Writing of Chinese Learners of English edited by long time experts Liz Hamp Lyons and Yan Jin clearly demonstrates the authors collective years of writing and teaching about writing assessment The book s 13 chapters written by recognized experts in assessment of Chinese speakers learning English represent a wide array of important topics written in reader friendly language and offering evidence for pedagogical practices as well as high stakes testing of writing Teachers researchers administrators of writing programs in China and test developers who seek counsel about this population need look no further than to add Assessing the English Language Writing of Chinese Learners of English to their reading list Deborah Crusan Wright State University USA

Guide to College Writing Assessment Peggy O'Neill, Cindy Moore, Brian Huot, 2009-03-20 While most English professionals feel comfortable with language and literacy theories assessment theories seem more alien English professionals often don t have a clear understanding of the key concepts in educational measurement such as validity and reliability nor do they understand the statistical formulas associated with psychometrics But understanding assessment theory and applying it by those who are not psychometricians is critical in developing useful ethical assessments in college writing programs and in interpreting and using assessment results A Guide to College Writing Assessment is designed as an introduction and source book for WPAs department chairs teachers and administrators Always cognizant of the critical components of particular teaching contexts O'Neill Moore and Huot have written sophisticated but accessible chapters on the history theory application and background of writing assessment and they offer a dozen appendices of practical samples and models for a range of common assessment needs Because there are numerous resources available to assist faculty in assessing the writing of individual students in particular classrooms A Guide to College Writing

Assessment focuses on approaches to the kinds of assessment that typically happen outside of individual classrooms placement evaluation exit examination programmatic assessment and faculty evaluation Most of all the argument of this book is that creating the conditions for meaningful college writing assessment hinges not only on understanding the history and theories informing assessment practice but also on composition programs availing themselves of the full range of available assessment practices
