Richards, 2012-12-06 In analysing the development and achievements of Polish forestry and forest industries over the last four decades it is necessary to take into consideration the situation prevailing after the end of the Second World War when these sectors of the national economy were starting their activities First of all it is necessary to consider the effects of the war such as a the harvesting from the forests of the present Polish territory of 3 about 200 million m of merchantable wood which is equal to the normal harvest over a 12 year period b the destruction of over half the woodworking industrial potential In consequence the forested area inside the new Polish boundaries amounted 40 years ago only to 20 8 per cent of the whole area of the country There has been a continuing process of increasing the forested area of the country although at a diminishing rate In 1986 the forest area amounted to 27 7 per cent of the land surface that is to 8 7 million ha an increase of over 2 million ha in 40 years Intensive afforestation performed regardless of the ownership category of the land by the State forest service was aimed primarily at making good the losses in the forested area and the rational use of land not fit for agricultural purposes Bioenergy from Wood Thomas Seifert, 2013-12-02 This book is written for scientists and practitioners interested in deepening their knowledge of the sustainable production of bioenergy from wood in tropical and sub tropical countries Utilising the value chain concept this book outlines the necessary aspects for managing sustainable bioenergy production A wide range of topics is covered including biomass localization modelling and upscaling production management in woodlands and plantations and transport and logistics Biomass quality and conversion pathways are examined in order to match the conversion technology with the available biomass A section is dedicated to issues surrounding sustainability The issues covered in a life cycle assessment of the bioenergy system include socio economic challenges local effects on water biodiversity nutrient sustainability and global impacts Through this holistic approach and supporting examples from tropical and sub tropical countries the reader is guided in designing and implementing a value chain as the main management instrument for sustainable wood

Utilization of Residual Forest Biomass Pentti Hakkila, 2012-12-06 An increase in the demand for wood results in improved recovery and less residual biomass in the forests Paradoxically interest in forest residue as a renewable source of raw material seems to be in a reverse ratio to its availability in a certain area Finland and Sweden are probably more dependent on forestry and forest industries than any other developed countries in the world A sufficiency of raw material for integrated forest industries is vital for the national economy of both countries and a great deal of attention is being paid to the long term potential of unutilized biomass left behind in logging operations Furthermore since these countries possess no reserves of fossil fuels and since their per capita consumption of primary energy is exceptionally high they also consider unmerchantable forest biomass a realistic source of indigenous energy A joint Nordic research project on harvesting and utilization of logging residue was carried out in 1969 1976 under the auspices of the Nordic Research Council on Forest Operations This fruitful cooperation soon gave rise to related national projects in Sweden Finland Norway and Denmark stimulating further research and producing practical applications Concurrently particularly after the worldwide energy crisis in 1973 research on all aspects of utilization of forest biomass mushroomed in the United States Canada and the Soviet Union An explosive increase occurred in both the number and diversity of biomass studies

Bioenergy from Sustainable Forestry J. Richardson, R. Björheden, P. Hakkila, A.T. Lowe, C.T. Smith, 2005-12-30 Bioenergy from Sustainable Forestry synthesizes information needed to design or implement sustainable forest management systems for production of biomass for energy in conjunction with other forest products It is organized around the criteria for sustainable forest management productivity environment social issues economics and legal and institutional framework More than 25 international experts from 10 countries have brought together available ecological physical operational social and economic information and identified gaps in knowledge related to biomass production and harvesting systems This is the first time that such comprehensive information has been brought together under one cover using an integrated holistic approach Guiding principles and state of the art knowledge are emphasized The book will enable forest resource managers and planners to evaluate the ability of specific forest regions to sustainably meet bioenergy production demands
