Division of Teacher Education and Certification, Kentucky. Department of Education, 1992 Administrative Register of Kentucky, 2006 Primary Mathematics Pedagogy at the Intersection of Education Reform, Policy, and Culture Sarah Murray, Princess Allotey, 2021-11-29 This volume provides an in depth comparative examination of how primary mathematics education is influenced by national education reform policy local resources and culture in three different countries By drawing on first hand observations and interviews as well as analysis of policy documents and learning resources the book considers the viability of transferring best practices in primary mathematics education across global contexts Three diverse countries Ghana the US and Singapore are explored Similarities and differences are highlighted and the influence of national and regional initiatives related to pedagogical strategies teacher education and cultural expectations are considered to offer an insightful examination of how best practices might be shared across borders This book will benefit researchers academics and postgraduate scholars with an interest in international and comparative education mathematics and educational policy Those with a specialization in primary mathematics education including pedagogy and teacher preparation will also benefit from this book Kentucky Administrative Regulations Service, 2004 Resources in Education, 1990 Comparison of the Implementation of the Kentucky Beginning Teacher Internship Program (KBTIP) with Criteria for Successful Change in Education Martha Joyce Hager, 1987 Assessment for Experiential Learning Cecilia Ka Yuk Chan, 2022-09-29 Chan s book explores the challenges in assessing experiential learning deepens our understanding and inspires readers to think critically about the purpose of assessment in experiential learning Experiential learning has been studied and proven to be effective for student learning particularly for the development of holistic competencies i e 21st century skills soft skills transferable skills considered essential for individuals to succeed in the increasingly global and technology infused 21st century society Universities around the world are now actively organising experiential learning activities or programmes for students to gain enriching and diversified learning experiences however the assessment of these programmes tends to be limited unclear and contested Assessment plays a central role in education policies and students approach to learning But do educators know how to assess less traditional learning such as service learning entrepreneurship cross discipline or cross cultural projects internships and student exchanges While the current assessment landscape is replete with assessments that measure knowledge of core content areas such as mathematics law languages science and social studies there is a lack of assessments and research that focus on holistic competencies How do we assess students ability to think critically problem solve adapt self manage and collaborate

Central to the discussion in this book is the reason students are assessed and how they should be assessed to bring out their best learning outcomes. Offering a collection of best assessment practice employed by teachers around the world, this volume brings together both theoretical and empirical research that underpins assessment and perceptions of different stakeholders' understanding of assessment in experiential learning from students, teachers, and policymakers. The idea of assessment literacy also plays an important role in experiential learning; for example, reflection is often used in assessing students in experiential learning, but how reflection literate are educators? Are they aware of the ethical dilemmas that arise in assessing students? These questions are discussed in detail. The volume also introduces a quality assurance programme to recognise student development within experiential learning programmes. The book will be particularly informative to academic developers, teachers, students, and community partners who struggle with the development and assessment for experiential learning; those who plan to apply for funding in experiential learning; and policymakers and senior managements seeking evidence and advice on fine tuning curricular assessment designs and quality assurance. Study of the Support Activities of the Interns and Resource Teachers in the Beginning Teacher Internship Program Donna Bray Taylor, 1987. The purpose of this research is to determine the most beneficial and least beneficial activities of the interns and resource teachers of Kentucky's Beginning Teacher Internship Program during the 1985-86 school year. Thirty-eight interns and forty-one resource teachers completed questionnaires developed by the researcher. A systematic sample was taken from the alphabetical school files of public and private systems at the State Department of Education. A t-test showed a significant difference at the .01 level in the number of completed activities during the fifty hours of consultation. The most beneficial activity was discussed classroom management conferencing with students and student behavior. The least beneficial activity was visited a computer lab. A Chi-Square formula did not yield a significant difference in completion of the time requirements for classroom observations after school consultation or recommended continuation by the participants. No significant difference was found in the items measuring professionalism. Three recommendations were made for improvement: assign the resource teacher before the school year begins; reduce or make more flexible the number of consultation hours; and the resource teacher needs to be within the same curriculum area, grade, and/or the same building as the intern.
