Artificial Intelligence and Mental Health Care Jorge Piano Simoes, Peter ten Klooster, Jannis Kraiss, Patrick K. A. Neff, Uli Niemann, 2024-08-09

New developments in machine learning ML and artificial intelligence AI hold great promise to revolutionize mental health care In this context ML and AI have been deployed for several different goals including 1 the early detection of mental disorders 2 the optimization of personalized treatments based on the individual characteristics of patients 3 the better characterization of disorders detrimental to mental well being and quality of life as well as a better description of projected trajectories over time and 4 the development of new treatments for mental health care Despite their great potential to transform mental health care and occasional breakthroughs ML and AI have not yet fully achieved these goals This research topic aims to bridge the gap between the potential uses of ML and AI and their practical application in standard mental health care More specifically we welcome original research submissions applying ML and AI to promote public health by reducing the burden of chronic disorders with detrimental effects on well being e g psychopathological distress and improving quality of life We also welcome submissions applying ML and AI in heterogeneous datasets e g subjective scales and questionnaires biomarkers neuro psychological assessments etc from Big Data sources e g large datasets of clinical populations electronic health records from nationally representative cohorts and or biobanks studies using experiencing sampling methods etc to gain mechanistic insight on how different chronic conditions associated with psychopathological distress can affect patient well being and quality of life Finally we also welcome opinion papers and reviews on how to develop AI applications in mental health care responsibly while integrating biopsychosocial aspects of patients to promote better mental health care

Aha-Experiences in Psychotherapy in Relation to Dysfunctional Beliefs and Self-Esteem Sarah König, 2017-02-15

Bachelor Thesis from the year 2016 in the subject Psychology Clinical Psychology Psychopathology Prevention grade 1 8

Johannes Gutenberg University Mainz Psychologisches Institut language English abstract This study is part of a pioneering project examining aha experiences regarding dysfunctional beliefs using the Rethink paradigm designed for this purpose

Findings stemming from problem solving research lead to consider aha experiences as beneficial for motivational clarification a working mechanism of psychotherapeutic change The present study examines interactions of implicit self esteem and therapeutically relevant aha experiences in participants that have no history of psychological disorders Lower self esteem was shown to be associated with experiencing more aha moments regarding dysfunctional beliefs but this moderate effect fell short of becoming significant A small non significant effect was found for the number of aha experiences being associated with a decline in self esteem Given the limitations of the present study future research should be carried out to satisfactorily answer the question of how aha experiences influence implicit self esteem and to examine whether aha experiences are superior to other clarification processes in bringing about therapeutic change
