Jack O'Judgment Edgar Wallace, 2020-05-22

They picked up the young man called Snow Gregory from a Lambeth gutter and he was dead before the policeman on point duty in Waterloo Road who had heard the shots came upon the scene. He had been shot in his tracks on a night of snow and storm and none saw the murder. When they got him to the mortuary and searched his clothes, they found nothing except a little tin box of white powder which proved to be cocaine and a playing card, the Jack of Clubs. His associates had called him Snow Gregory because he was a doper and cocaine is invariably referred to as snow by all its votaries. He was a gambler too and he had been associated with Colonel Dan Boundary in certain of his business enterprises. That was all. The colonel knew nothing of the young man's antecedents except that he had been an Oxford man who had come down in the world. The colonel added a few particulars designed as it might seem to the impartial observer to prove that he, the colonel, had ever been an uplifting quantity. This colonelcy was an honorary title which he held by custom rather than by law.
