

Evolution & Natural Selection

DOODLE NOTES

GENETIC Evolution

natural selection changes the range of traits in a population - there are 3 ways it can change. Let's look at a moth population that shows

An example of natural selection!

COOL! A population of light brown moths lives on a tree trunk. The hawk can't see them.

YUCK! A hawk catches a light brown moth. The hawk can't see the dark brown moths.

NOOOOOO! The light brown moths are more likely to get eaten. They are the best to survive.

A higher proportion of dark brown moths are left to reproduce. The light brown moths are eliminated.

Stabilizing

Stabilizing selection is a type of natural selection that favors the average phenotype and eliminates extreme phenotypes. The graph shows a normal distribution of traits.

GENE FLOW

What is it?
 Movement of genes in or out of a population. It happens through movement of individuals or gametes. It can be the movement of pollen or seeds. This can bring new alleles into a population or change the frequency of existing alleles.

Example:
 A population of butterflies. A new butterfly is introduced from another population. This is an example of gene flow.

Evolution by natural selection

Describe the theory of natural selection and how Darwin's theory was first conceived (thought of).

An English naturalist named Charles Darwin went on a voyage around the world. He noticed that animals in similar environments had similar characteristics. For example, in the Galápagos Islands, Darwin observed similar but non-identical species of finches on each island. He noticed that their beaks seemed to be adapted to their food source. After some time thinking and the work of other scientists, Darwin developed his theory of natural selection.

Key points:
 - Variation: Individuals in a population have different traits.
 - Inheritance: Traits are passed from parents to offspring.
 - Selection: Some traits are more advantageous than others, leading to higher survival and reproduction.
 - Adaptation: Over time, the population becomes better suited to its environment.
