

Illegal immigration

4 pages | 989 words

American citizens work tirelessly every day to earn money to make a living and provide for their families. It isn't easy for everyone, and that's why we are given the benefits like food stamps and unemployment. So, imagine the frustration in rewarding someone with benefits and jobs who break the law. There are many financial and social issues concerning the illegal immigrant outbreak that's documented over the years. This problem is being repeatedly disregarded. We currently house 11 to 12 million most of which come from central and southern Mexico, South America, and Latin American countries. Moreover, this is a representation on why illegal immigration impacts our nation greatly. The most common misconception about illegal immigration, is that immigration in general is not wanted at all. There is an extensive difference between being smuggled into the country, whether it be by boat, tunnel, or air travel versus applying for a visa and obtaining your citizenship. Opinions surrounding illegal aliens coming into our country are both good and bad. However, people don't want to see how the bad may overshadow the good. It's good when there's unchallenging admission to the laborer that would do work no citizen is willing to do. It's considered bad when they ingress to the United States illegally with their families and are supplied with free social services like healthcare, public-- or sometimes private education and welfare. Say their children are born here, they're instantly granted citizenship which automatically allows the parents welfare checks. For example, "Households headed by immigrants illegally in the country have higher use rates than native households overall and for food programs (57 percent vs. 22 percent) and Medicaid (51 percent vs. 23 percent)" (Meyer, WashingtonBeacon). Bad is when they now live in this "American Dream", and still commit crimes like killing American citizens because of gangs or just plain ignorance. Most importantly, it's gotten bad when illegals become so entitled that they parade cities and streets demanding rights given to legal citizens, downright forgetting they are here illegally and without citizenship. President Donald Trump has been seeking to prevent more unjustified deaths, some because of illegal immigrants, administering crucial immigration laws and pushing for a border wall. This comes straight after the new rise of American deaths. For example, "Gustavo Perez Arriaga, a 32-year-old Mexican illegally living in the U.S., was arrested for the murder of California Police Officer Ronil Singh, 33. Officer Singh was shot and killed during a morning traffic stop involving Arriaga on December 26, 2018. Two days later Arriaga was captured in Bakersfield, CA, 280 miles away from the City of Newman. Police stated they believe Arriaga was attempting to flee back to Mexico. Arriaga, reportedly had been involved in a gang and arrested twice previously for DUI. He had also been previously deported back to Mexico" (Salvi, ojjapc). Officer Singh recently welcomed a baby around Christmas and now his child has to grow up without a father. This is where the problem starts and never seems to end. If there were tighter security and stricter laws on illegal immigration, this could have been prevented. Now granted, not...
