New Jersey

On June 1, 1786, the New Jersey General Assembly granted to Thomas Goodley, Abner Cox, and Walter Wood authority to coin three million coppers weighing six pennyweight and six grains (150 grains total, or 977 grains apiece, to be completed by June 1788, on condition that they deliver to the state treasurer "any Cash Part of the full sum they shall make." These coppers were in good service in 1787 for the striking Matthew Ogden also played a significant financial and political role in the operation.

In an undertaking of the kind, the contractors purchased the metal and assumed all expenses of coining. The difference between their expenses and the total face value of the coins issued represented the profit.

Later, Goodley and Cox asked authority to coin two-thirds of the total independently of Wood. Their petition was granted November 23, 1786. Wood was known to have produced the coins at Middletown, while Cox and Goodley operated at Rahway. Coins with a diameter of 30 mm or more are generally considered Middletown products. Coins were also minted in Elizabethtown by Ogden and by others in New York.

The obverse shows George Washington of the state seal, a horse's head with plow, and the legend NOV & CÆSARIA: Novæ Jersæ. The reverse has a seated female seated and, for the first time in reverse, the legend E PLURIBUS UNUM of the Constitution of 1787. More than 140 varieties exist. The majority have the horse's head facing to the right.
