Designing and Teaching the Secondary Science Methods Course Aaron J. Sickel, Stephen B. Witzig, 2017-04-13 The improvement of science education is a common goal worldwide. Countries not only seek to increase the number of individuals pursuing careers in science but to improve scientific literacy among the general population. As the teacher is one of the greatest influences on student learning, a focus on the preparation of science teachers is essential in achieving these outcomes. A critical component of science teacher education is the methods course where pedagogy and content coalesce. It is here that future science teachers begin to focus simultaneously on the knowledge, dispositions, and skills for teaching secondary science in meaningful and effective ways. This book provides a comparison of secondary science methods courses from teacher education programs all over the world. Each chapter provides detailed descriptions of the national context, course design, teaching strategies, and assessments used within a particular science methods course and is written by teacher educators who actively research science teacher education. The final chapter provides a synthesis of common themes and unique features across contexts and offers directions for future research on science methods courses. This book offers a unique combination of behind-the-scenes thinking for secondary science methods course designs along with practical teaching and assessment strategies and will be a useful resource for teacher educators in a variety of international contexts.

Trust-Based Observations Craig Randall, 2020-07-30 The results of observations are not improving teaching and learning. Pertinently, the Gates Foundation's recently completed effort to improve student outcomes through enhancing the teacher evaluation process failed to achieve substantive improvement. The way observations are currently designed serve as an obstacle to teacher risk taking. Teachers fear negative evaluations when their pedagogy is rated and they lack faith in being supported by supervisors because a trusting relationship between them and their observer has not been built. Trust-Based Observations: Maximizing Teaching and Learning Growth is a schema-changing evaluation model that understands how people perform at their best when they feel safe and supported. It begins with twelve 20-minute observations per week followed by collegial conversations driven by reflective questions, sharing observed teaching strengths, and the building of safe and trusting relationships with teachers. Add the elimination of rating pedagogical skills and replace it with rating mindset and teachers' trust. When teachers fully embrace risk taking and innovation, it leads to remarkable teaching transformations and improved student learning.
