the Heart Kisha Supernant, Jane Eva Baxter, Natasha Lyons, Sonya Atalay, 2020-02-13 Archaeological practice is currently shifting in response to feminist indigenous activist community based and anarchic critiques of how archaeology is practiced and how science is used to interpret the past lives of people Inspired by the calls for a different way of doing archaeology this volume presents a case here for a heart centered archaeological practice Heart centered practice emerged in care based disciplines such as nursing and various forms of therapy as a way to recognize the importance of caring for those on whom we work and as an avenue to explore how our interactions with others impacts our own emotions and heart Archaeologists are disciplined to separate mind and heart a division which harkens back to the origins of western thought The dualism between the mental and the physical is fundamental to the concept that humans can objectively study the world without being immersed in it Scientific approaches to understanding the world assume there is an objective world to be studied and that humans must remove themselves from that world in order to find the truth An archaeology of the heart rejects this dualism rather we see mind body heart and spirit as inextricable An archaeology of the heart provides a new space for thinking through an integrated responsible and grounded archaeology where there is care for the living and the dead acknowledges the need to build responsible relationships with communities and with the archaeological record and emphasize the role of rigor in how work and research is conducted The contributions bring together archaeological practitioners from across the globe in different contexts to explore how heart centered practice can impact archaeological theory methodology and research throughout the discipline
