Effects of Meditation Training Sessions on Students

Meditation, as a strategy for patient care, is being used with increasing frequency as a strategy for non-invasive treatment of stress related behavioral disorders, with remarkable success levels in a wide range of populations (Anderson, 2015). As a treatment, meditation relies on a wide variety of MTM (Meditation Training Methods), some of which have been developed recently, in conjunction with holistic medical practices, and some of which have been used for, literally, centuries, in one form or another (Berk & Wise, 2015). Studies researching the effectiveness of meditation training (Morris, Langley & Hill, 2015; Wastrom, 2014) have tended to gather statistics from participants who had been exposed to meditation prior to testing, and who were not screened for similarity in disposition with regard to their risk level for responding unfavorably or favorably to stress levels. Our study hopes to introduce a level of consistency in the participants backgrounds and likelihood of response levels to the training. [section continues]
