the second civil war As it was common during that period of time the war was transferred to the womb of women and sectarian conflicts during that time and even later usually involved mudding the blood of future generations of one sect Therefore I wish to examine whether this was the case in Lebanon In order to do so I will divide my paper into five sections The first section of the paper will discuss the socio economic background of the working class families of different sects in Lebanon The second section of the paper will investigate the other means that were used during the war to weaken the Other i e the focus will be directed at unarmed forms of violence The third part of the paper will discuss the effects of the war and more specifically it will focus on how women perceived experienced and the extent to which they were affected by the war The fourth section will attempt to draw a comparative analysis in which the situation of women in Syria Lebanon and Palestine have been affected similarly during different conflicts at different locations and periods The last part of the paper will attempt to draw some conclusions about the eruption of the war and whether its consequences still cause distress to Lebanese women today
