

HERNIA REDUCTION

A The hernia can be divided into several sections. The proximal portion is closest to the neck or fascial defect, through which the hernia protrudes. The distal portion is farthest from the neck.

B When attempting to reduce the hernia, be careful to not invaginate the distal portion first or the proximal portion may obstruct the opening as it is pushed over the sides.

C By placing fingers along the edge of the hernia neck, one can direct the contents into instead of over the fascial defect.
