	External Ear The external ear consists of the pinna (auricle) and the ear canal. The pinna is the visible part of the ear that collects sound waves and directs them into the ear canal. The ear canal leads to the eardrum (tympanic membrane).	Middle Ear The middle ear is located behind the eardrum and contains three small bones: the malleus, incus, and stapes. These bones vibrate in response to sound waves, amplifying the sound and transmitting it to the inner ear.	Internal Ear The internal ear is located behind the middle ear and contains the cochlea and the vestibular system. The cochlea is responsible for hearing, and the vestibular system is responsible for balance and spatial orientation.	Common ENT Disorders Common ENT disorders include otitis media (middle ear infection), sinusitis (inflammation of the sinuses), allergic rhinitis (hay fever), and otitis externa (ear infection). Other conditions include hearing loss, tinnitus (ringing in the ears), and vertigo (dizziness).	ENT Examination The ENT examination typically includes a history and physical exam, followed by a focused examination of the head and neck. This may involve inspecting the ears, nose, and throat (ENT exam) and performing a hearing test (audiometry).	ENT Treatment Treatment for ENT disorders depends on the specific condition. It may include antibiotics for infections, decongestants for sinusitis, antihistamines for allergies, and surgery for structural issues or chronic conditions.	ENT History The history for an ENT patient should include symptoms, duration, and any associated conditions. It is important to ask about recent infections, allergies, and any changes in hearing or vision.	ENT Physical The physical exam for ENT includes inspecting the ears, nose, and throat. The ear exam involves looking for redness, discharge, and hearing. The nose exam involves inspecting the nasal cavity for inflammation and discharge. The throat exam involves inspecting the pharynx and larynx for redness and swelling.	ENT Differential The differential diagnosis for ENT symptoms includes infections, allergies, structural issues, and systemic diseases. It is important to consider the patient's history and physical findings when making a diagnosis.	ENT Management Management of ENT disorders involves a combination of medical and surgical treatments. It is important to provide patient education and follow-up care to ensure the best outcome.
	Nasal Cavity The nasal cavity is the part of the respiratory system that is located inside the nose. It is responsible for filtering, warming, and humidifying the air that we breathe. The nasal cavity is divided into two halves by the nasal septum.	Sinuses The sinuses are air-filled cavities in the skull that are connected to the nasal cavity. They help to lighten the skull and produce mucus. The four main sinuses are the maxillary, ethmoid, sphenoid, and frontal sinuses.	Allergic Rhinitis Allergic rhinitis is a common condition that causes inflammation of the nasal cavity. It is caused by an allergic reaction to environmental allergens such as pollen, dust, and mold. Symptoms include sneezing, runny nose, and itchy eyes.	Sinusitis Sinusitis is an inflammation of the sinuses. It can be caused by a viral infection, a bacterial infection, or allergies. Symptoms include a thick, discolored nasal discharge, facial pain, and a reduced sense of smell.	ENT Examination The ENT examination for the nasal cavity involves inspecting the nasal cavity for inflammation, discharge, and structural issues. This is typically done using a nasal speculum and a nasal endoscope.	ENT Treatment Treatment for nasal cavity disorders includes nasal irrigation, decongestants, and corticosteroids. For allergic rhinitis, antihistamines and allergen avoidance are also important.	ENT History The history for a patient with nasal cavity symptoms should include the duration and nature of the symptoms, any associated conditions, and any recent infections or allergies. It is responsible for passing food and liquids from the mouth to the stomach and air from the lungs to the trachea.	Larynx The larynx is the part of the respiratory system that is located in the front of the throat. It is responsible for producing sound and protecting the trachea from food and liquids.
