

Surface Weather Map Showing Storm System in the Eastern United States

Warm air advection occurs when the wind blows across isotherms from higher pressure (values to lower isotherm values). This is because air is being transported towards a lower location by the movement of air. Based on this the low above, you would expect _____ of the isotherms to be rising. Cold air advection occurs when the wind blows across the isotherms from lower (colder) values to higher (warmer) values. Thus, colder air being transported by the wind to a warmer location produces falling temperatures.

Based on wind directions and the isotherm pattern on the Figure 2 map, determine the type of air advection (warm or cold) that would be occurring at each station.

1. Winds at station A are occurring at Station _____
 C
2. Cold air advection was occurring at Station _____

 D
3. Generalized from the map, isotherms of wind speed (temperature) values associated with weather systems, some westward of Low, would be expected to have _____ air advection.
