

Summary of Estimated Water Use in the United States in 2005

By Nancy L. Barber

The image shows a thumbnail of the report cover. At the top left is the USGS logo. The title 'Summary of Estimated Water Use in the United States in 2005' is centered. Below the title is a map of the United States with a blue overlay. To the right of the map is a small table with three columns: 'State', 'Total Withdrawal (Mgal/d)', and 'Freshwater Withdrawal (Mgal/d)'. Below the map and table is a large photograph of a person in a field, possibly a farmer or researcher. The cover also contains several columns of text, including an abstract and a list of authors.

SUMMARY

About 410,000 million gallons per day (Mgal/d) of water was withdrawn for use in the United States during 2005. About 80 percent of the total (328,000 Mgal/d) withdrawal was from surface water, and about 82 percent of the surface water withdrawn was freshwater. The remaining 20 percent (82,600 Mgal/d) was withdrawn from groundwater, of which about 96 percent was freshwater. If withdrawals for thermoelectric power in 2005 are excluded, withdrawals were 210,000 Mgal/d, of which 129,000 Mgal/d (62 percent) was supplied by surface water and 80,700 Mgal/d (38 percent) was supplied by groundwater.

Water withdrawals in four States — California, Texas, Idaho, and Florida — accounted for more than one-fourth of all fresh and saline water withdrawn in the United States in 2005. More than half (53 percent) of the total withdrawals of 45,700 Mgal/d in California were for irrigation, and 28 percent were for thermoelectric power. Most of the withdrawals in Texas (26,700 Mgal/d) were for thermoelectric power (43 percent) and irrigation (29 percent). Irrigation accounted for 85 percent of the 19,500 Mgal/d of water withdrawn in Idaho, and thermoelectric power accounted for 66 percent of the 18,300 Mgal/d withdrawn in Florida.
