Student Exploration: Estimating Population Size

Essential Question: How can we estimate the size of a population?

Before Starting: In the Estimating Population Size Gizmo™, you will estimate the size of a population of fish in a tank. You will use the mark-recapture method, which involves catching, marking, and releasing a certain number of fish, and then recapturing some.

Think about the challenges of fish in big or small, shallow tanks. In this activity, you will estimate the size of a population of fish in a tank. You will use the mark-recapture method, which involves catching, marking, and releasing a certain number of fish, and then recapturing some.

1. Suppose a scientist has 100 fish and releases them. She then catches 20 fish. She finds 10 of the 20 fish are marked. How many fish are in the tank? 100

a. What do you think the scientist would do next? She would catch another 20 fish.

b. How many of the 20 fish would you expect to be marked? 10

2. A fish biologist estimates that 6000 fish live in a lake. One year later, the population is estimated to be 6300 fish. How much did the population increase? 300

Part 1: Suppose a scientist has 100 fish and releases them. She then catches 20 fish. She finds 10 of the 20 fish are marked. The Estimating Population Size Gizmo™ will help you estimate the size of a population. To apply this to a fish tank, you would catch and tag a certain number of fish, release them, and then recapture some. You would then use the mark-recapture method to estimate the size of the population.

3. The scientist has 100 fish and releases them. She then catches 20 fish. She finds 10 of the 20 fish are marked. How many fish are in the tank? 100
