These urban centers aided in the Union (Northern) victory over the South. The North had extensive railroad and canal transportation systems. The South, however, did not possess such facilities to support the war effort. During the Reconstruction era, the South underwent a major change in its economic development. Railroads, ports, roads, and communication systems were constructed. By the late 19th century, and as argued in Frederick Jackson Turner's Book of 1891, there was no available territory (there) that was unclaimed. It had been worked and populated by American settlers and immigrants. It was influenced American imperialism - politicians, writers, businessmen, and military - to set upon overseas expansion.
