usually the resource to be distributed between the subjects is given by the experimenter. Here the pie is produced via joint production effort. This scenario is more general than bargaining without production and we think it is more natural as well. The description of the raw data showed that the production choices are considerably dispersed but nevertheless systematically biased toward the respective player's efficient production level. The distributions of demanded return shares and demanded surplus shares partly replicated findings of other studies, namely a low percentage of high demands and a considerable proportion of equal surplus splits. But they also indicate that advance production compared to no production should be considered an important treatment in studies on ultimatum bargaining.

Integration Interrupted Karolyn Tyson, 2011-02-21. An all too popular explanation for why black students aren't doing better in school is their own use of the acting white slur to ridicule fellow blacks for taking advanced classes, doing schoolwork, and striving to earn high grades. Carefully reconsidering how and why black students have come to equate school success with whiteness, Integration Interrupted argues that when students understand race to be connected with achievement, it is a powerful lesson conveyed by schools, not their peers. Drawing on over ten years of ethnographic research, Karolyn Tyson shows how equating school success with acting white arose in the aftermath of Brown v Board of Education through the practice of curriculum tracking, which separates students for instruction, ostensibly by ability and prior achievement. Only in very specific circumstances, when black students are drastically underrepresented in advanced and gifted classes, do anxieties about the burden of acting white emerge. Racialized tracking continues to define the typical American secondary school, but it goes unremarked, except by the young people who experience its costs and consequences daily. The rich narratives in Integration Interrupted throw light on the complex relationships underlying school behaviors and convincingly demonstrate that the problem lies not with students but instead with how we organize our schools.

Modern Methods in High School Teaching Harl Roy Douglass, 1926. This volume addresses teachers and principals, presenting a comprehensive treatment of the methods of teaching in high schools. The author assumes a familiarity on the part of his readers with the nature of the learning process, adolescence, and the psychological foundations of interests and motives as they relate to wholehearted pupil activity. The fundamentals of both theory and practice are set forth, and an attempt has been made to outline and describe the newer types of procedure which are being employed in different subjects in the best secondary schools. Throughout the volume, the attempt has been made clearly to represent practices rather than to advocate their adoption. The reader is permitted to draw his own conclusions. The book will appeal to the type of reader who wants to be intelligent about what is going on in high school teaching Holtmath 8 Marshall P.
