

PROJECT EVALUATION

Outcomes are defined as medium-term effects of project outputs. Outcomes are observable changes that can be linked to project interventions. Usually, they are the achievements of the project partners. They are logically linked to the intended impact. Outcomes are the results that link to the immediate objectives as described in the project document.

Impact is defined as the positive and negative, primary and secondary long-term effects produced by a development intervention, directly or indirectly, intended or unintended.<sup>2</sup> Impact is the result that links to the development objective as described in the project document. It is often only detectable after several years and usually not attained during the life cycle of one project. For this reason, there is a need to plan for impact, recognizing that the project will likely achieve outcomes.

A project is accountable for achieving outcomes and contributing to development impact. Since the achievement of broad, long-term development changes depends on many factors, it is usually not possible to attribute impact to one project. All outcomes of a project should contribute to the intended impact.
