Before the 1400s, the Old World and the New World had

They adapted well to the new world. As a result, they began to reproduce and run wild. Cattle and horses because they formed sheep by eating and walking on them.

Some Indigenous people found horses useful. Horses made it easy to hunt deer. These large footed animals were an important source of food, clothing, and other things for some indigenous peoples. However, hunting on horseback was one of the factors that caused Beach numbers to drop.

People also brought plants across the ocean. This affected both the Old and New Worlds during the Columbian Exchange. In the Old World, it led to less hunger and better nutrition. As a result, Europe's population increased. Plagues had an especially big effect on life in Europe. When combined with winter or milk, plagues have many health benefits. Therefore, they become an important part of many Old World diets.

Corn also had a major impact on the Old World. It grows well in some places where wheat, such as potatoes and wheat, do not. Cassava, a type of root, had a similar effect in Africa. It provided many people with a healthy source of food, which caused a population increase. Other New World crops, including chili peppers, tomatoes, and vanilla, led to changes in food flavors across the Old World.

The Columbian Exchange brought many goods to new places around the world.
