Political Islam, World Politics and Europe Bassam Tibi, 2014-07-11 The new and updated edition of Political Islam World Politics and Europe focusses on the shift within political Islam in light of 9 11 and the events of the Arab Spring from a jihadist struggle to institutional Islamism Refuting what has often been referred to by commentators as the moderation of Islamism the second edition of this book introduces the concept of institutional Islamism a process which Tibi argues was accelerated in the aftermath of the Arab Spring Both jihadist and institutional Islamism pursue the same goal of an Islamist state but disagree fundamentally on the strategy for achieving it Whilst jihadism is committed to the idea of a violent Islamic world revolution institutional Islamism embraces political institutions as a means to an end Turning to the events of the Arab Spring in Tunisia Libya and Egypt this book attempts to determine whether an abandonment of violence is enough to underpin a shift to genuine democracy Analysing the fall of Morsi in particular Tibi questions what lessons can be learnt from his presidency and argues that this event will not change the overall trend of development from jihadism to institutional Islamism A timely addition to existing literature this book will be of interest to students and scholars studying Middle Eastern and European Politics Political Islam and International Relations

Transforming the European Energy System Leonard Coen, Jean-Luc Frast,2016-09-13 Master s Thesis from the year 2012 in the subject Politics Environmental Policy grade 1 0 University of Copenhagen course International Law Economics language English abstract The European Union aspires to be a frontrunner in the transition towards a low carbon economy Its energy policy aims at reconciling climate and environmental objectives with concerns over security of supply and competitive markets The restructuring and modernisation of the European energy system is driven by a continuous liberalisation regime in conjunction with the promotion of renewable energy sources and energy efficiency The implications of this strategy are manifold whereof the modernisation and upgrade of the electricity grid is increasingly recognized to be the quintessential prerequisite to meet tomorrow s energy challenges The emergence of the Smart Grid has enthused industry and policy makers alike as it has the potential to be the enabler for a future low carbon electricity system by facilitating demand side efficiency increasing the shares of renewables and distributed energy generation and enabling electrification of transport The European Commission views the Smart Grid as the backbone of Europe s future energy infrastructure advancing the development of green energy while making the system more stable through information and communication technologies The deployment of Smart Grid implies a technological transformation that will have a deep impact on the whole electricity value chain The thesis explores the effects of this transition process with regard to energy market liberalisation Smart Grid deployment and energy market integration We scrutinize the relationship of these three variables by considering Smart Grids as a function of liberalisation liberalisation as a function of Smart Grid deployment and last but not least market integration as a function of liberalisation and Smart Grid deployment
