Information Retrieval Systems Gerald J. Kowalski, 2007-08-23 The growth of the Internet and the availability of enormous volumes of data in digital form have necessitated intense interest in techniques to assist the user in locating data of interest The Internet has over 350 million pages of data and is expected to reach over one billion pages by the year 2000 Buried on the Internet are both valuable nuggets to answer questions as well as a large quantity of information the average person does not care about The Digital Library effort is also progressing with the goal of migrating from the traditional book environment to a digital library environment The challenge to both authors of new publications that will reside on this information domain and developers of systems to locate information is to provide the information and capabilities to sort out the non relevant items from those desired by the consumer In effect as we proceed down this path it will be the computer that determines what we see versus the human being The days of going to a library and browsing the new book shelf are being replaced by electronic searching the Internet or the library catalogs Whatever the search engines return will constrain our knowledge of what information is available An understanding of Information Retrieval Systems puts this new environment into perspective for both the creator of documents and the consumer trying to locate information proportions by simply classifying all data and counting the labels assigned by the classifier is known to often return inaccurate biased class proportion estimates The book introduces learning to quantify by looking at the supervised learning methods that can be used to perform it at the evaluation measures and evaluation protocols that should be used for evaluating the quality of the returned predictions at the numerous fields of human activity in which the use of quantification techniques may provide improved results with respect to the naive use of classification techniques and at advanced topics in quantification research The book is suitable to researchers data scientists or PhD students who want to come up to speed with the state of the art in learning to quantify but also to researchers wishing to apply data science technologies to fields of human activity e g the social sciences political science epidemiology market research which focus on aggregate macro data rather than on individual micro data
