

systems (Kulakozoglu, 2005, 2009; Kaya, 1987). The children of authoritarian parents have been described as anxious, angry, aggressive, and having low self-esteem (Bancroft, 1986, 1987, 1971; Mac-coby & Martin, 1992). These findings suggest that negative parenting styles may in fact act as a risk factor for anxiety symptoms.

Anxiety sensitivity was originally identified and defined by Reiss and McNally (1985) as the fear of anxiety-related sensations. It is thought that anxiety sensitivity develops early-on in a person's life. There is even some evidence that anxiety sensitivity may be partly inherited from parents (Stein, Jang, & Livesley, 1999). However, it is generally thought that anxiety sensitivity largely develops from early experiences in life. For example, a child who sees his or her parents overreact with fear to sickness may begin to believe that certain normal bodily feelings (such as those connected with anxiety) are dangerous and threatening (Mitt, Stewart, & Cox, 1998). Scher and Stein (2003) found that anxiety sensitivity mediated a relationship between early parenting experiences and current distress. In fact, anxiety sensitivity was predicted by levels of parent threat, hostility, and rejection. Indeed, parents of anxious children have been described in the literature as anxious, controlling, meddling, over-protective, rejecting, affectionless, demanding, and partial (Horney, 1947). These findings also suggest that negative parenting styles may be a risk factor for anxiety sensitivity.

The relationships with parents are crucial for children because parents prepare their children for life (Eriksson, 1996). Adolescence can be defined as a period of transition from childhood to adulthood, and how or when the problems arise in this transition phase depends on the positive attitudes of parents. That is, adolescents can easily solve their personal and interpersonal problems by means of establishing positive dialogues with parents (Cox, Paley, Hindle, & Gerhardt, 1996; McGillivray, Rychanski, Mourabian, & Burke, 2007; Olson, 2001; Yildirim, 2006). Taken into account by parents, adolescents feel valued and express their feelings and thoughts freely, and this process will increase their self-confidence (Erdoğan & Kuyuluoglu, 2011). In a healthy manner, the perceptions of Schuler's problems of adolescents and their families is required. In this respect, it should be taught healthy ways of coping with problems in adolescence within the framework of preventive counseling services. And school guidance service should provide such as conflict resolution training, anger control, social skills training, and effective interpersonal problem-solving skills with school-based programs for adolescents. It is thought that these programs for parents and educators to be useful (Chen & Akbay, 2009; Seren, 2010). This research is not without limitations. First the sample consisted of adolescents who were recruited from the school setting. In as much as they represent a convenience sample, the generalizability of findings needs to be shown through replication in a more representative sample from the general population and among adolescents in other settings. Second longitudinal studies are needed to measure the role of negative parenting styles and their influence on the development of the anxiety-related sensations and the processes that lead to the elevation of anxiety sensitivity. In addition, the attachment framework may help extend understanding the development of anxiety sensitivity into other samples. Taking into account these important limitations, this study adds to the knowledge based on the origins of anxiety sensitivity and its suggested relation to parenting styles, results clearly show that authoritarian and overprotective parenting styles are particularly important factors in anxiety sensitivity.
