Goldie was born in Auckland, New Zealand on 20th October 1870. He showed artistic talent from a young age, winning awards from the Auckland Society of Arts and the New Zealand Art Students' Association while in high school.

After leaving Auckland College and Grammar School, he worked part-time for his father, who owned a timber merchant business. He also studied art part-time under Louis John Steele. It was under Steele's tutelage that Goldie became interested in studying abroad. In 1891, Dr George Grey saw some of Goldie's paintings and convinced Goldie's father (Charles Goldie) to allow his son to further his education in Paris.

In July 1893, aged 23, Goldie arrived at Académie Julian in Paris. It was here that Goldie received traditional academic training in the fine arts and won several awards.

Personal Life

Goldie is one of New Zealand's most famous artists and a contribution to the growth of professional New Zealand art. He is also one of New Zealand's most controversial artists, with critics both praising and attacking his work.

Goldie received criticism for several years when not only did he study under different tutors and masters of the arts, he also travelled through Europe to visit galleries. He returned to Auckland, New Zealand in 1898 and set up a studio with his former teacher, Louis J. Steele. The studio also doubled as a teaching academy until the French Academy of Art.
