Radioactivity: Types, Half-Life & Safety

Science uses communication skills and/or by applying knowledge and innovative thinking often faced with a real-world issue or problem requiring a solution. Using critical and creative thinking, students can have a positive impact, understanding the problem fully, identifying its causes and effects, and the first step in finding an effective resolution.

Designing solutions requires considering various constraints, such as budget, time, and safety concerns. Students may be part of a solution design team that designs, constructs, and the impact of their design on the community. For example, creating a solution for a water filter that is safe and easy to use, which influences the effectiveness of the solution.

After identifying a solution, determining how it works, what constraints affected it, and any consequences that may affect them and provide feedback on the idea. Communication, group design skills, and reflecting on the impacts of the innovation are essential skills. This process can be applied to various fields, including engineering, design, and science.
