

House Tree Person Interpretation Elements¹

House

Mood of the house (level of warmth, accessibility.)
Is it humble and simple, or large and ostentatious?

Are there numerous details or is it sparse and empty?

Do details contribute to the general feeling of the house? Is the house accessible or closed?

Does it dominate the picture or is it small and placed to one corner of the page?

An extremely small house suggests rejection of the home life; an extremely large and dominating house might reflect view of the home as overly restrictive, and controlling.

Details

Roof. The roof is often considered to represent either a person's fantasy life, or intellectual side. An extremely large roof suggests that a person is highly withdrawn or extremely involved with an inner world fantasy. If windows are drawn on the roof, the person might tend to view the environment through a world of fantasy images. The absence of a roof suggests a highly constricted, concrete orientation.

The doors and the windows

The doors and windows are the portions of the house that relates to the outside world. Small bolted-up houses, or barred windows are doors suggest that the person might be withdrawn, and inaccessible, or possibly suspicious or even hostile. This is further exaggerated if the doors and windows are entirely missing. An open door and/or many windows suggest strong needs for contact with others. However, if the indicators of openness are overdone, the person might be highly dependant. Very large windows, especially in the bedroom, or bathroom, suggests exhibitionism. The absence of windows on the HTP, in combination with several other features such as enlarged heads, absence of feet, and extremely geometric figures, have frequently been found in the drawings of abused children.

Chimney

A chimney can relate either to a person's availability and warmth, or the degree of power and masculinity he or she feels. A missing chimney suggests passivity or a lack of psychological warmth in a person's home life. Whereas normal amounts of smoke accentuate warmth in the home, an excessive amount of smoke suggest inner tensions, pent-up aggression, emotional turbulence, and conflict. However, interpretations of chimneys need to take into consideration biasing factors, such as geography (e.g., tropics) and season (summer vs. winter).

Accessories of the House

Pathways that are wide and lead directly to the door suggest the client is accessible, open, and direct. In contrast, the absence of a pathway indicates the client may be closed, distant and removed. Pathways that are long, and winding may reflect someone who is initially aloof, but can later warm up and become accessible. If the pathway is extremely wide, the client might initially express a superficial sense of friendliness but later become aloof and
