

Alaris® SE Pump flow sensor guide

The Alaris SE pump may be used with a flow sensor to alert the user of an empty fluid container.

1. Plug the Model 180 flow sensor into the appropriate channel receptacle (A, B). The receptacle is found on the back of the pump. (Figure 1)
2. Prime the administration set per hospital protocol. Fill drip chamber to approximately 2/3 full. (Figure 2)
3. Attach the Model 180 flow sensor to the upper portion, or flanges, at the top of the drip chamber. (Figure 3)
 - a. The sensor optics of the flow sensor should be slightly below the drop-forming orifice and above the fluid level in the drip chamber.
4. The clinician may elect to either:
 - a. Enter a Volume to be Infused (VTBI) value: When the VTBI counts down to 0.0 mL, the pump will transition to infusion Complete KVO status. The VTBI = 0 message and alert tone will notify the clinician.
— OR —
 - b. Turn OFF the VTBI value: by pressing CLEAR then ENTER. The pump will deliver all the fluid in the fluid container or metered chamber. A "No Upstream Flow Detected" message and alarm tone will notify the clinician of the empty container. Attach the flow sensor to the instrument handle when not in use. (Figure 4)

Helpful hints:

- Following each "No upstream flow detected" alarm, check the level of fluid in the drip chamber. The fluid level must be maintained at approximately 2/3 full to prevent air-in-line.
- When infusing certain fluids through a 60 drop/mL administration set at high rates a No upstream flow detected alarm may occur. This alarm occurs as a result of a steady stream of fluid that is not detected by the flow sensor. Remove and disconnect the flow sensor from the receptacle. Program a VTBI and restart the infusion.
- Excessive tilting or movement of the drip chamber, when using the flow sensor, may result in a "No upstream flow detected" alarm.
- A "No upstream flow detected" alarm will occur if the flow sensor is removed from the drip chamber during infusion.
- A "Flow sensor unplugged" alarm will result if the flow sensor is unplugged from the flow sensor receptacle during infusion.
