

Lab 52: Fertilization and Early Development

Introduction

Fertilization is the process by which the nuclei of an egg and a sperm cell fuse together to form a new cell, the zygote. This process is essential for the development of a new organism.

During fertilization, the sperm cell penetrates the egg cell, and the nuclei of the two cells fuse together to form a new cell, the zygote. This process is essential for the development of a new organism. The zygote then undergoes cleavage and differentiation to form the embryo.

Embryonic development is the process by which the zygote develops into a fully formed organism. This process is essential for the development of a new organism. The embryo then undergoes cleavage and differentiation to form the fetus.
