Which is NOT a function of messenger RNA?	Molecular Genetics Read the passage carefully before answering the questions that follow.  While we have discussed the structure and function of DNA, we have not yet discussed the process of how the genetic information is used to synthesize proteins. This process is called gene expression. It is the process by which the information encoded in a gene is used to synthesize a functional gene product. The process of gene expression involves the transcription and translation of genetic information. During transcription of a gene, the DNA double helix is unwound and one strand is used as a template for synthesizing a complementary strand of messenger RNA. The process of transcription is controlled by regulatory proteins. Transcription of a gene produces a single-stranded messenger RNA molecule. The messenger RNA molecule is then translated into a protein. Translation is the process by which the information encoded in a messenger RNA molecule is used to synthesize a protein. The process of translation involves the assembly of amino acids into a polypeptide chain. The genetic code is a set of rules that defines how sequences of nucleotide bases (adenine, thymine, guanine, and cytosine) within a DNA or RNA molecule are translated into the amino acid sequences of proteins. Each sequence of three nucleotides, called a codon, specifies a particular amino acid or a stop signal. The genetic code is universal, meaning that the same codons specify the same amino acids in all organisms.  Answer the correct option for each question. 1.
