Introduction

What are fossils and how do they form? What happens to a fossil? How do fossils help us understand the history of life on Earth?

Definition: A fossil is the preserved remains or impressions of the remains of organisms that lived long ago.

Types: Fossils can be divided into two main categories: body fossils and trace fossils. Body fossils are the remains of the organism itself, such as bones, shells, or leaves. Trace fossils are the remains of the organism's activity, such as footprints or burrows.

Formation: Fossils form through a process called fossilization, which involves the replacement of organic material with mineral matter.

Discovery: Fossils are discovered through a variety of methods, including excavation, mining, and the use of modern technology like ground-penetrating radar.

Importance: Fossils provide a window into the past, allowing scientists to study the evolution of life on Earth. They also help us understand the Earth's history, including the climate and the environment of the past.
