fighting ranks McConnell wrote All along I had been convinced that the United States ought to aid in the struggle against Germany With that conviction it was plainly up to me to do more than drive an ambulance The more I saw the splendor of the fight the French were fighting the more I felt like an embusque what the British call a shirker So I made up my mind to go into aviation 2 On May 13 1916 McConnell participated in the unit s first patrol Thirty eight pilots of the Lafayette Escadrille flew Nieuport biplanes that traveled at 110 miles per hour 180 km h Operating from Luxeuil Field in eastern France McConnell s group typically set off each day at dawn clad in fur lined outfits for two hour patrols Only after the battle of Verdun were the planes equipped with machine guns prior to this pilots simply fired machine guns single handedly while steering The 47 round Lewis machine guns were replaced with 500 round Vickers models which synchronized with the rotating propellers While convalescing from a back injury suffered during a landing mishap McConnell found time to compose Flying for France In aerial combat with two German planes McConnell died on March 19 1917 above the Somme battlefields He was buried in a meadow between the villages of Flavly le Martel and Jussy in Aisne France A monument erected to McConnell in Carthage bears an inscription reading in part He fought for Humanity Liberty and Democracy lighted the way for his countrymen and showed all men how to dare nobly and to die gloriously Air Service Boys Flying
