Use the following information to answer questions 1 through 4.

Number	Event	Explanation
1	Immigration	The entry of the species and establishment of genetic populations, at which individuals first become fixed in frequency, and from which they may later have subsequently originated.
2	Extinction and mutation	The reduction of individuals to zero, or the origin of new individuals. Extinction may result from natural conditions, from the organism's inability to withstand environmental conditions, and may lead to population replacement of one form.
3	Genetic drift	A change in the genetic composition of a population occurs primarily through chance events, which are especially evident in small populations. Genetic drift may result from the loss of individuals, the establishment of new forms from the remains of an existing population, and changes in genetic form.
4	Genetic selection	Selected structures are favored over others, and those that are better suited to the environment are favored. These structures primarily arise from mutations, which are favored over other structures.
