

Thatcher's choice in the big Tory split

THATCHER, Threatened

By TERENCE LANCASTER
THE Tory Party is split on Falklands Islands policy with Premier Margaret Thatcher and Foreign Secretary Francis Pym on an opposite collision course.

A cry of "Sell-out" by a Conservative MP summed up the anger of right-wingers when Mr Pym was speaking in the Commons last night.

His speech coincided with a robust response by Mrs Thatcher earlier in the day.

Her attack on her Government's original plan announced when Argentina seized the island, six weeks ago today.

But Mr Pym was in a more conciliatory mood, favouring an early withdrawal for almost total British troops and a return to the status quo ante.

What is certain is that in the opinion of the United Nations, Britain is required to withdraw its troops from the island.

It does not seem as though Mr Pym is going to buy off the right-wingers, but he is trying to tell them Mrs Thatcher would be accused of a sell-out.

But there is only one alternative to a withdrawal of British troops from the island.

That is to fight. And that is a hard sell in Westminster, but right-wing Conservatives are being urged along here by British troops on the ground for peace.

It is a hard sell for Edward Heath, too, but he is on the Falklands. He has said that a withdrawal from the island is a sell-out.

He indicated his former Conservative MP suggested that the withdrawal of troops would not be possible without a referendum.

Then he advised Mr Pym to ignore newspaper headlines which said that the Government would not give up the island.

A strong number of Tory MPs believe that the Government is not for a Falklands withdrawal.

Mrs Thatcher said last night that she was working for a peaceful solution, but a peaceful solution would be a sell-out.
