The older and more grounded I become in the middle age phase of my life, the more aware I am of the person I have become and how the choices made both myself and my family have formed what is known as "My Life". My family traditions, upbringing and values have influenced my biological, cultural views and values allowing me to formulate a life, principles, and a family similar in some aspects to my family, who raised me, while other aspects are astoundingly different. With my life and career goals very different from that of my parents' lives and their expectations these influences by class, culture, and ethical teachings are instrumental in shaping my views, perceptions and how they played a part in my current family life. (TCO 3,4) Looking back at my childhood, I feel as if I was living life while being contained within a bubble. I was born in Maryland just outside of the city of Baltimore in the suburbs.

I had three older brothers who ultimately absorbed the majority of my mother's time and a work alcoholic father, caught up in a capitalistic industrial job playing the hunter gatherer roll, who saw us for what amounted to be minutes a day, never attending any of my functions. As seen in the structural-functional theory as it relates to gender, my mother conformed to societies patriarchy views because during the seventies sexism dictated a woman's place within society. We all attended private schooling at the local Roman Catholic Church while being force-fed the same ideals and traditions that were instilled and passed down through the previous generations. I grew up in what is considered middle to lower class society and had a very narrow and sheltered view or the world outside or the discrimination others endured. My family, religious and educational values were dictated through threats for nonconformity in my family to include occasional physical punishment that would be considered deviant behavior by today's standards, potentially resulting in criminal charges.

To further monopolize more of my mothers' time, she felt it necessary to play her maternal roll and had a fifth child nine years later. (TCO 1, 2, 3, 4,5) Growing older through my adolescent and teen years and trying to escape the shadows of three older brothers and a younger sister, I forged the wrong path academically, while looking for acceptance from peers which usually resulted with hanging with the wrong crowd. I fortunately developed good work ethic and habits because my father insisted we all work during the summer months to minimize the possibility of, kids being kids, and me getting into trouble. Upon graduating high school, by the skin of my teeth, I entered the Air Force. The Air Force hierarchy and structure reinforced and further instilled society's views of conformity through rules and regulations. Protocols such as, the "Military Chain of Command", allowed me to mature and changed my very sheltered views of society altering my perspective of society both national and globally. (TCO 3,4,5,6)

My new travels, endeavors and encounters, throughout the world, during my military...

behavior using the life course paradigm a multidisciplinary framework for studying people's lives structural contexts and social change It contributes to marketing research by providing new insights into the study of consumer behavior and illustrating how to apply the life course paradigm's concepts and theoretical perspectives to study consumer topics in an innovative way Although a growing number of marketing researchers either implicitly or explicitly subscribe to life course perspectives for studying a variety of consumer behaviors their efforts have been limited due to a lack of theories and methods that would help them study consumers over the lifecycle When studying consumers over their lifespan researchers examine differences in the consumer behaviors of various age groups e.g. children baby boomers elderly etc or family life stages e.g. bachelors full nesters empty nesters etc inferring that consumer behavior changes over time or linking consumption behaviors to previous experiences and future expectations Such efforts however have yet to benefit from an interdisciplinary research approach This book fills this gap in consumer research by informing readers about the differences between some of the most commonly used models for studying consumers over their lifespan and the life course paradigm and providing implications for research public policy and marketing practice Presenting applications of the life course approach in such research topics as decision making maladaptive behaviors e.g. compulsive buying binge eating consumer well being and cognitive decline this book is beneficial for students scholars professors practitioners and policy makers in consumer behavior consumer research consumer psychology and marketing research
