Monarch Butterflies: Incredible Migration

Monarch butterflies are famous for their long-distance migration. Each year, billions of monarchs travel from the northeastern United States and southern Canada to the mountains of Mexico. This incredible journey is a survival strategy to escape the cold winter months.

The monarchs begin their migration in late August or early September. They fly southward, following a path that is largely instinctive. The butterflies are able to navigate their way across thousands of miles of open space. They stop to rest and feed on milkweed plants along the way.

When they reach their destination in Mexico, they find a warm climate and a place to overwinter. They cluster together on the sides of mountains, where they can stay safe from predators. The monarchs remain in this state until the following spring, when they begin their journey back north.

The monarch butterfly is a symbol of hope and resilience. Its incredible migration is a testament to the power of nature and the ability of these small creatures to overcome great challenges.
