PLANNED CITIES IN THE INDUS VALLEY

GRID SYSTEM

WATER PLATFORMS

The Indus Valley civilization was one of the earliest urban societies in the world. It is known for its advanced city planning, including a grid system and a sophisticated water supply system. The cities were built on raised platforms to protect them from flooding. The grid system allowed for organized streets and buildings, which is a feature seen in many modern cities today.

The water supply system of the Indus Valley was a remarkable achievement. It consisted of a series of canals that brought water from the Indus River to the cities. The canals were built on a series of stepped platforms, which allowed the water to flow through them. This system was used to irrigate the fields and to provide water for the people of the cities. The grid system and the water supply system were two of the most important features of the Indus Valley civilization.
