

QUESTION 2 (10 MARKS)

Use each of the following data following correct statistical conventions.

- 1. Frequency table that lists all the categories of variable and the number of observations in each category.
- 2. Contingency table - Organized data showing the relationship between two categorical variables.
- 3. Chi-Square Test - A statistical test used to determine if there is a significant association between two categorical variables. It is based on the idea that the observed frequencies should be close to the expected frequencies if there is no association.
- 4. Expected frequencies - The frequencies that would be expected if there was no association between the variables.
- 5. Significance level - A threshold value (usually 0.05) used to determine if the results of a statistical test are statistically significant.
- 6. P-value - A measure of the probability of observing the results of a statistical test, assuming the null hypothesis is true. A p-value less than the significance level indicates that the results are statistically significant.
