Abstract

This research paper analyzes the correlation that exists between sleep and high-school student performance in class. To answer this question, we compared academic performance against questionnaires that detailed the sleep schedules of 122 high school students. Our results showed that there was a positive correlation between poor academic performance and getting fewer than 8 hours of sleep a night. The results also revealed that poor sleep patterns can lead to concentration and behavior issues. The implications of this study could be used to promote high schoolers sleeping at least 8 hours a night.

Writing and Publishing Science Research Papers in English Karen Englander, 2013-10-11 This book provides a comprehensive review of the current knowledge on writing and publishing scientific research papers and the social contexts. It deals with both English and non Anglophone science writers and presents a global perspective and an international focus. The book collects and synthesizes research from a range of disciplines including applied linguistics, the sociology of science, sociolinguistics, bibliometrics, composition studies and science education. This multidisciplinary approach helps the reader gain a solid understanding of the subject. Divided into three parts, the book considers the context of scientific papers, the text itself and the people involved. It explains how the typical sections of scientific papers are structured. Standard English scientific writing style is also compared with science papers written in other languages. The book discusses the strengths and challenges faced by people with different degrees of science writing expertise and the role of journal editors and reviewers.

Advances in Automatic Text Summarization Inderjeet Mani, Mark T. Maybury, 1999. Until now there has been no state of the art collection of the most important writings in automatic text summarization. This book presents the key developments in the field in an integrated framework and suggests future research areas. With the rapid growth of the World Wide Web and electronic information services, information is becoming available on line at an incredible rate. One result is the oft-decried information overload. No one has time to read everything yet we often have to make critical decisions based on what we are able to assimilate. The technology of automatic text summarization is becoming indispensable for dealing with this problem. Text summarization is the process of distilling the most important information from a source to produce an abridged version for a particular user or task. Until now there has been no state of the art collection of the most important writings in automatic text summarization. This book presents the key developments in the field in an integrated framework and suggests future research areas. The book is organized into six sections: Classical Approaches, Corpus Based Approaches, Exploiting Discourse Structure, Knowledge Rich Approaches, Evaluation Methods, and New Summarization Problem Areas.
