Pre-Movie Summary

Gasland is a documentary film that explores the complex and controversial world of energy production in the United States. The film follows the journey of a family from California to Texas, where they discover that their water is contaminated with natural gas. The film then follows the family as they investigate the source of the gas and the impact of the oil industry on the environment and public health. The film is a powerful and thought-provoking work that raises important questions about the future of energy and the role of government in regulating the industry.
